necessary as well as that of his staff. I am therefore to inform you that the British Indian Customs authorities will henceforth examine, at their discretion, baggage belonging to Ruling Princes, whether that baggage is accompanied or unaccompanied, on its arrival in India. It is clear that this discretion is likely to be exercised strictly if any Ruling Prince's personal baggage is not clearly distinguished from that of his staff, and His Excellency the Crown Representative hopes therefore that Ruling Princes will in their own interests ensure that such distinction is made and that each member of their Staff completes and signs his own separate form of customs declaration.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,
